New York Life Award

Does this piece relate to themes of death, grief, or personal loss? Apply for the New York Life Award, sponsored by the New York Life Foundation, which offers $2,500 scholarships to ten students whose works explore death and personal grief. Grief is the feeling and reaction associated with death. You can experience it after a loved one dies or after other major changes in your life. The death of a loved one and the grief that follows are a universal yet very unique, personal experience even in normal times. Sharing your story through art or writing can be a healing experience both for you and other teens who are grieving. Your creative work can help someone with similar experiences to you feel less alone.
